

| Module   | Intervention                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Placebo                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|----------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Module 1 | Motivation: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Exercises on identifying personal values and future aspirations in order to enhance treatment readiness and reduce resistance to change.</li> <li>Psycho-education on improving decision-making by weighting long-term consequences over immediate rewards.</li> <li>Based on structured goal-setting techniques, participants transform abstract desires into specific, measurable, and achievable objectives, increasing self-efficacy and clarity about their own needs and personal values in order to enhance treatment readiness.</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Physical activity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Psycho-educational content promotes the benefits of physical activity, identifies personal barriers, and set achievable goals to build motivation for physical activity.</li> <li>The importance of motor skills, coordination, and balance, enhancing physical confidence and improving participation in daily and therapeutic activities is highlighted.</li> <li>Through guided exercises, participants are introduced to break sedentary patterns, to increase awareness of health risks and motivated for a sustainable, active living.</li> </ul>                                                                                                        |
|          | Supervision and social relationships: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Development of skills to build trust and collaborative working relationships with supervision officers, reducing resistance against community supervision and improving adherence to supervision mandates.</li> <li>Identification of avoidance patterns that interfere with engagement in community supervision, using cognitive-behavioral strategies to enhance compliance with structured interventions.</li> <li>Through guided exercises, participants examine the impact of adult relationships on emotional regulation and behavioral stability, targeting deficits in capacity for adult intimacy.</li> </ul>                                                                                                                             | Sports: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Psycho-education provides the basics of muscle structure and function, increasing self-awareness of physical capabilities and enhancing motivation to engage in structured physical routines.</li> <li>in guided exercises, intrinsic and extrinsic motivators are identified as well as barriers like low confidence or time constraints that affect adherence on personal training plans.</li> <li>By reflecting on personal sport preferences in exercises, participants recognize how peer or cultural influences may shape physical activity choices, reducing susceptibility to negative social pressures.</li> </ul>                                               |
| Module 3 | Emotion management: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Identification of emotions as indicators of unmet personal needs, reducing impulsive reactions by linking affective states to underlying psychological demands.</li> <li>Through mindfulness exercises and case examples, participants learn the importance of non-reactive awareness of emotions and connected bodily sensations, improving impulse control and reducing maladaptive coping.</li> <li>Differentiation of emotional experiences and action urges using tools like the tension scale, fostering pause-and-reflect strategies to interrupt impulsive behaviors.</li> <li>Creation of a personalized skill set, with adaptive, individualized responses to emotional distress, enhancing long-term emotional regulation and self-management.</li> </ul> | Healthy sleep: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Psycho-education promotes that sleep quality directly influences emotional regulation, cognitive function, and physical health, addressing impulsivity and emotional dysregulation that undermine sleep hygiene.</li> <li>Understanding sleep cycles and physiological restoration helps link poor sleep to heightened stress, supporting those with external or sexualized coping patterns in developing healthier responses.</li> <li>Practical, non-drug strategies are taught in exercises to manage shift work and jetlag, promoting consistent routines and environmental adjustments that support long-term sleep stability.</li> </ul>                     |
|          | Problem solving: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Psycho-education on problem-solving deficits as a core component of self-regulation difficulties, understanding that challenges are manageable through structured, cognitive-behavioral approaches.</li> <li>Guided exercises following the 7-Step Problem-Solving Plan to systematically identify, define, and address problems, enhancing decision-making and reducing impulsive or avoidant reactions.</li> <li>Through video examples and case studies, participants practice distinguishing between changeable and unchangeable issues, generating realistic solutions, and evaluating outcomes.</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                        | Dreaming: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Psycho-educational content focus on the neuroscience of dreaming, including REM and non-REM sleep stages.</li> <li>Through exercises like dream journaling, and symbolic interpretation, participants develop reflective practices that enhance awareness of dreams.</li> <li>The module links stress, sleep disruption, and dream content, illustrating how chronic stress undermines executive function and exacerbates difficulties in structured thinking and solution generation.</li> <li>Case studies highlight trauma-related dream patterns, showing how unresolved psychological distress and poor sleep hinder insight and cognitive restoration.</li> </ul> |
| Module 5 | Offense-supportive attitudes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Need-principle: Identification of three offense-supportive cognitions; the participant must choose three out of 16 pre-defined offense-supportive cognitions.</li> <li>Psycho-education on how offense-supportive cognitions arise from selective attention to partial truths, reinforcing denial and</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Nutrition: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Adaptive: Psycho-education provides foundational knowledge on nutrition, digestion; the participant must choose three out of six nutrition styles.</li> <li>Through guided exercises, participants explore ethical, health, and environmental motivations for three out</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| Module          | Intervention                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Placebo                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
|-----------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|                 | minimizing consequences through psychological defense mechanisms. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Through cognitive restructuring, participants challenge distorted beliefs and promoting critical evaluation of harmful thought patterns in guided exercises.</li> <li>• Case studies and video examples illustrate real-world consequences of distorted thinking, bridging the gap between perceived justification and actual harm.</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | of 6 different nutrition types (e.g. plant-based diets, fostering empathy and prosocial decision-making). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Practical skills in meal planning and grocery shopping build confidence and sustainability, empowering lasting dietary changes that enhance psychological health and reduce behavioral risk.</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Module 6 | Sexuality: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Psycho-education focus on the differentiation between healthy and problematic sexual interests and on how sexual preoccupation can increase reoffending risk.</li> <li>• The module addresses emotional congruence with children as a potential risk-factor, emphasizing the importance of maintaining emotional and physical boundaries between oneself and children to reduce relapse potential (relapse prevention).</li> <li>• Cognitive restructuring techniques are used to challenge distorted beliefs about sexual behavior, fostering insight and promoting adaptive, non-harmful thought patterns.</li> <li>• Through identification of high-risk triggers and personalized coping strategies, the self-regulation, self-efficacy, and control over problematic sexual urges and fantasies will be focused.</li> </ul> | Well-being: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Psychological well-being is distinguished from happiness, focusing on meaning, inner balance, and personal growth, explored through reflections on identity, nature, music, and laughter.</li> <li>• Participants challenge the myth of universal well-being, recognizing its subjective nature and the importance of personal values, identity, and life context in shaping health and satisfaction.</li> <li>• Through exercises, participants explore the gut-brain axis, mindful eating, and hygiene practices, linking nutrition, self-care, and bodily awareness to mental clarity and psychological stability.</li> </ul> |